

Alumni profiles

Name: Louisa Krousti

Leaving year: 2001

Education/Training after St Mary's:

Mathematics of University of Warwick and
PGCE at University of Oxford.

Current role: Teacher of Maths

Current city: Chesterfield

What have you done since leaving St Mary's?

I left St Mary's in 2001 to study Mathematics at The University of Warwick. After completing my Bachelor's degree, I spent a year at The University of Oxford where I completed my PGCE.

I now work as a Maths teacher back at St Mary's and have done since 2005. I am also a proud wife and mum to two lovely girls.

Tell us more about your current job & role

I love my job. Teaching is a unique career where no two days are ever the same. I not only get to work with inspirational, talented young people but also fantastic colleagues.

All the staff are committed to making sure that the pupils of the school leave prepared to face the world, in every sense. It can be challenging and exhausting but it can also be uplifting and incredibly rewarding. It has certainly become not just a career but a vocation.

Best advice for current pupils at St Mary's

Whatever you do- do it as well as you possibly can!